Android: Releasing resources properly

Sometimes I have a "crash" of my app, and the Android system forces it to close, sometimes even before it has done whatever it needs to do. Because of that, I'm using the following code to clean up and release resources when the app is shutting down. The code is always executed and is executed in both main activity as well as a service.

@Override public void onDestroy() {
    super.onDestroy();
    if (myHandler != null) {
        myHandler.removeCallbacksAndMessages(null);
    unregisterReceiver(myReceiver);
    Log.i("ReceiverTask", "Disposing MyReceiver");
    if (mySmsManager != null) { myS
